In 2008 Green Ronin released Buccaneers of Freeport, a system-less sourcebook detailing some of the cunning rogues and ruthless cutthroats that ply the waters around Freeport. While you can create your own game stats for the characters presented in the book using the information provided, this enhancement aims to give you a hand by doing all the heavy lifting for you. Here you'll find complete 3rd Era stats for the characters in Buccaneers of Freeport.

Note: This PDF has been laid out, where possible, so that no character wraps at the column or page, allowing you to easily print the complete stat blocks you need for a given game session.
Chapter 1: Three-Sheets Kimbal

Three-Sheets Kimbal is a pirate with more legends gathered about him than there are gold coins in his biggest score. The lovable rogue himself spread most of these stories, some of them contradictory, in order to keep his friends and enemies alike guessing at what his next crazy scheme will be—and to make them eager to hear all about the next one. He recruits a new crew whenever he has a new scheme to pursue, and rarely takes on the same crew member twice, so very few know Kimbal well enough to tell fact from fiction.

The one element that unifies Kimbal’s adventures is his incredible luck. He’s always getting into dangerous situations—through his own actions or blind chance—but always manages to get out in some do-or-die, daredevil maneuver.

Among his numerous enemies is the church of the Pirate God, whose treasury he once looted. Despite that—or perhaps because of it—Harrimast seems to smile on Kimbal, and his vengeful clerics are never quite able to catch the slippery captain.

"Leftenant" Drake, First Mate

Drake was a Tagmatan naval officer and decorated war hero. That is, until he met Kimbal and was talked into joining one of his escapades. Now he’s an excommunicated traitor to a country that he still loves. Rather than blame Kimbal, though, he loyally serves the one captain who will still have him.

(Nota: The artifact mentioned in Drake's background is most likely an orb of storms with a requirement curse.)

Syncapit, Ship’s Bosun

Kimbal’s mother saved this former hunter from life as a slave, and his gratitude is unending. He tracked down her son, and persists in returning to Kimbal’s ship somehow, even though the captain regularly leaves him behind after every venture. He does, however, make an excellent bosun due to his obsession with detail.

Nash the Crag Gnome, Ship’s Lookout

Originally an Iovan mercenary fighting deep underground, Nash somehow ended working on The Crimson Wave before Kimbal acquired it. A tragic accident cost him his legs, but he continues to be a dependable lookout. In fact, he flatly refuses to come down from his crow’s nest.

(He may use a crossbow and the Hide and Use Rope skills without penalties.) His speed is reduced to 5 ft., and he cannot run or jump, though he may climb and swim as if his base speed was 10 ft.
Chapter 2: Captain Scarbelly

Scarbelly. The very name strikes terror, disgust, or both in the hearts of those who ply the seas around Freeport. This orc captain callously hurls his violent crew at other ships, taking great losses as they slaughter their unfortunate prey, but he never lacks for new recruits when he makes port. Most other pirates won’t have a thing to do with him, due to his dangerous temper and vile record. Somewhat surprisingly, Scarbelly’s crew hardly ever cause any serious trouble in Freeport itself, so the Captain’s Council seems unable or unwilling to put an end to his crimes. Meanwhile, the list of people with a grievance against Scarbelly grows longer, while the orc doesn’t seem to care one whit what anyone thinks of his deeds—as long as they fear him.

Captain Scarbelly

Scarbelly is listed as “journeyman” in The Pirate’s Guide to Freeport, and as a 7th-level fighter in the 3rd Age Freeport Companion. In Buccaneers, he is a “master” with several “journeymen” crew, so alternate statistics are presented here.

Aggro, the First Mate

Aggro is first mate of the Bloody Vengeance, and also the crewman who has known Scarbelly longest—they belonged to the same tribe, before taking to the sea. His love of violence and pain makes him ruthlessly efficient at keeping the crew of line, and his lack of ambition makes him the one member of the crew who Scarbelly remotely trusts. Aggro lives for very little beyond the sadistic pleasures of inflicting pain, and in Scarbelly’s company he finds plenty.

Fasyndren

Fasyndren is a mysterious, unsettling fortune-teller who occasionally accompanies Scarbelly on his voyages. Many outside the crew see her as merely his consort, but those who live on the Bloody Vengeance know better than to ask questions about the true nature of their relationship. Scarbelly always heeds the seer’s words, even when she is navigating a course without using any traditional instruments, and through waters no sane man would travel. However, the ship always returns with far more plunder than it could acquire through piracy alone.

His silver tongue allowed him to convince Scarbelly that he could arrange for Freeport to be a safe haven for the Bloody Vengeance. Chapter 3: Alfhild

Alfhild's father, a northern barbarian king, arranged her marriage with Ragnar, heir to a kingdom of his own. The princess found her intended to be a disgusting drunkard and womanizer, so spurned the match and joined the cult of the Shieldmaidens instead. While among their ranks, she gained fame for singlehandedly slaying the chieftain of the ice trolls in those monsters' most recent war with the human tribes. Several witnesses to this deed pledged themselves as her bondsmen, in spite of her sex, and they became the core of a crew of berserking raiders who are now feared throughout seas of all latitudes.

Ragnar, however, was thoroughly smitten and swore to accept no compensation—he would settle for no less than Alfhild's hand in marriage. He abandoned his princely duties in the north to pursue her into the southern waters, and eventually followed her to Freeport. His brother, Glyfmar, swore to hunt down Alfhild himself and force her to wed Ragnar, at any cost. Thus would the Drakkensfyr family honor be restored, and he would be free of the burden of ruling in their ailing father's stead. So far he has had no better luck than his lovesick brother.

Alfhild is fully detailed in the 3rd Age Freeport Companion. This enhancement describes notable members of her crew—as well as a couple of enemies.

Chapter 3: Alfhild

Alfhild's father, a northern barbarian king, arranged her marriage with Ragnar, heir to a kingdom of his own. The princess found her intended to be a disgusting drunkard and womanizer, so spurned the match and joined the cult of the Shieldmaidens instead. While among their ranks, she gained fame for singlehandedly slaying the chieftain of the ice trolls in those monsters' most recent war with the human tribes. Several witnesses to this deed pledged themselves as her bondsmen, in spite of her sex, and they became the core of a crew of berserking raiders who are now feared throughout seas of all latitudes.

Ragnar, however, was thoroughly smitten and swore to accept no compensation—he would settle for no less than Alfhild's hand in marriage. He abandoned his princely duties in the north to pursue her into the southern waters, and eventually followed her to Freeport. His brother, Glyfmar, swore to hunt down Alfhild himself and force her to wed Ragnar, at any cost. Thus would the Drakkensfyr family honor be restored, and he would be free of the burden of ruling in their ailing father's stead. So far he has had no better luck than his lovesick brother.

As a particularly blessed member of the Bear Lodge, Guthrim is now a werebear. He is a hulking, hairy man in human form, and wears a bearskin cloak to heighten the resemblance to his totem animal. He shifts into bear form when he goes berserk in battle, which has inspired all sorts of lurid tales about a massive bear fighting alongside Alfhild's raiders. Nearly as many enemies flee at the mere sight of the bloody monster as they do from his captain.

Note: Guthrim is an afflicted werebear, so cannot infect others with the curse of lycanthropy.

Stellan is Alfhild’s most trusted companion, and commands the Snow Queen in her absence. Most of the time, he is a calm, fearless, reliable first mate to whom his men bring their problems and conflicts. However, in the heat of battle, he becomes a bestial, howling berserker reveling in bloodshed. These rages sometimes last for hours after a battle, but Stellan has never attacked a comrade... so far.

Berserker’s Curse (Ex) Stellan’s rage is so great that he cannot fully control it. The duration of his rage is 1d20 x 16 minutes. However, if the d20 roll is a natural 1, his rage lasts the normal time (11 rounds); if a natural 20, it is a new 1d20 x 15 minutes.

Once all foes have been downed, Stellan must make a DC 15 Will save or attack the closest visible ally or neutral character. If this victim falls, a new save is allowed. If the save is successful, he controls himself until a new attack, insult, etc., provokes a new Will save.

After any rage, Stellan is fatigued for a length of time equal to the rage’s duration. He must also make a Fort save (DC = duration of rage in minutes) or be exhausted for the first half of that recovery period.

Berserker’s curse counts as a permanent madness.

Bonus Barbarism: Ragnar Drakkensfyr

While Ragnar waits for his next opportunity to try to win Alfhild, willing or not, he makes a living for himself as a prize fighter in the One Ring.

Ragnar has armor and weapons appropriate for a warrior of his mettle, but fights unarmed and naked in the 'Ring, due to the rules against magic there. Stats for this gear is listed in [brackets] below.

Chapter 4: Flynn the Quick

Flynn Delmonico is a privateer backed by a Continental power. His reputation in Freeport is rather divided—honest citizens see him as a hero making the seas safe for commerce, while pirates find him a gadfly that more and more captains yearn to swat.

Flynn is less interested in bringing pirates to justice as he is in giving them a taste of their own medicine. His own painful epiphany leads him to believe that only by making evildoers suffer as their victims have will they see the errors of their ways—and in his extreme arrogance, he thinks he knows best how to punish them. The Captains' Council has unsuccessfully attempted to rein in this loose cannon, but Flynn cares little for the law—it only gets in the way of his personal brand of justice.

Meanwhile, Flynn keeps making enemies and leaving them alive, a policy that will almost certainly stab him in the back someday. So far, though, Delmonico's skill, cunning, and sheer audacity have kept him alive far longer than anyone ever expected.

Cerric Steelsong

Cerric is one of the most skillful swordmasters from the elven nations on the Continent. He served as a teacher and bodyguard to numerous lords, but left that life in order to pursue greater personal mastery of the fighting arts. He saved Flynn’s life while they served aboard the same riverboat, and swore to train him until the human was the better swordsman. This nigh impossible task keeps him bound to Delmonico, whom he now serves as weaponsmaster.

Delen Windwright

Delen grew up as a petty thief on the streets of Freeport, and learned enough charm to talk himself out of trouble when caught. The skills he learned while running and tumbling across the city’s roofs allowed him to join a troupe of wandering acrobats. This career was cut short by his larcenous streak, and his life would have been as well if not for Flynn. He is now a member of the Retribution’s crew and spends almost all of his waking hours in the rigging or the crow’s nest.

"Nimble" Jim Thistle

On the surface, at least, Nimble Jim seems to be a living testimony to Flynn's mission: a reformed pirate. He was a captain of some notoriety until the Retribution ambushed his ship and seized it within minutes. He surrendered, claiming to see the error of his ways, and has served Flynn loyally ever since, acting as a model crewman and volunteering his extensive knowledge of the waters around Freeport. Only time will tell if Jim's repentance is genuine, or a mere sham.

Typical Privateer

The bulk of Flynn's crew is comprised of experienced sailors from Freeport itself. These men are honest, share their captain's idealism, and see themselves as protectors of their home port. Few, however, have the fighting experience of a blooded pirate, so Cerric and Flynn drill new recruits so that they will (hopefully) survive their first taste of real combat.

Chapter 5: Get o’ Yarash

The Get o’ Yarash was a name once given to any maritime bogeyman, any senseless murdering monster in the ghost stories sold by sailors and their kin. However, in recent years, the name was applied to one particular beast, and to his ship. The Get’s crew are monsters—men of part or full goblinoid or orc ancestry, a trio of ogres, and even more exotic humanoids.

The Get’s original warband was gathered to take advantage of the chaos caused by the war between the elves and the northern barbarians. While raiding, the ogre stole a ship and took to the sea as a pirate. It wasn’t until his navigator piloted the ship into the Devil’s Triangle that the Get took on its current purpose: to kill and spread fear in the name of the crew’s new god, Yarash.

Get o’ Yarash

The Get o’ Yarash is a fearsomely savage pirate with the blood of giants and demons mixed in his veins. His large hands are clawed, his head is deformed and horned, his teeth are like chisels, his body is covered in tumors and self-inflicted wounds, and his back sports bat-like wings.

Unlike most of his crew, however, Get retains a degree of rationality in his madness: he does not slaughter members of his crew on a mere whim, and he can plan ahead to maximize the amount of blood that he will spill in his god’s name.

Touched by Yarash

(Indefinite Madness)

Anyone who visits the Devil’s Triangle while aboard a ship piloted by a devotee of Yarash suffers the same transformation as the Get’s crew. Each victim suffers from sleep terrors (DC 20 Will save or suffer the effects of the nightmare spell whenever asleep) every night until they embrace Yarash’s nightly teachings. (This also results in gaining 5 IP each night that the save is failed by 5 or more.)

Once a creature has succumbed to worshipping the god, its alignment changes permanently to chaotic evil and can never be cured of this madness.

Such creatures also become sadists, if they were not before. See the Psychosexual entry in the Indefinite Madness table in the 3rd Age Freeport Companion.

Most characters who would lose class abilities or the ability to advance in a class due to the alignment change suffer the usual penalties. However, there are some exceptions, such as Cuyerl the Flayed, who is no longer neutral but continues to advance as a mystic navigator.
Cuyerl the Flayed

Cuyerl was somewhat mad even before he met the Get. When the ogre tricked and murdered the rest of his ship’s crew, the hobgoblin took their side and was spared. His talent for navigation is the chief reason that the Get’s crew managed to survive their first year of raiding.

Then came the fateful day when Cuyerl took the ship into the Devil’s Triangle, which transformed them all. The hobgoblin was the first to embrace Yarash, and did so with his entire being. The Get flayed and nearly killed the pilot for what he had done, but was ultimately taken in by Cuyerl’s embrace of pain and the seductive message he preached.

Gillslitter

Gillslitter is an idiot, even by ogre standards, but his long reach, strong hands, and tenacity make him useful to the Get o’ Yarash. He was maimed in battle years ago, but when Whitecoat joined the crew, the albino crafted him a partly mechanical, partly magical prosthetic arm. Gillslitter delights in using “his toy,” as he calls it, and is happiest when he finds a new use for it.

Chapter 6: The Stormdaughter

Common tales about the elven sorceress Aesha Algosiël paint her as a beautiful but savage marauder, dressed in little but the blood of her prey. She uses her prisoners to sate her lust for gore, violence and sex, and the lucky ones are merely sold as slaves. She hates other members of her own race most of all, and even sailors who run afoul of her have ample reason to fear the worst at her hands.

The Stormdaughter has few allies, though she does occasionally partner with pirates as ruthless as she is, but only for as long as she gains something by the association. She has also been known to ally herself with evil aquatic races such as the sea devils, but by what means is unknown. Her disregard for pirate custom has earned her many enemies in Freeport, most notably the Admiralty and a number of local privateers. However, the captain of The Crimson Shark is quite good at her trade, so remains very much at large.

Skalla Fishkiller

This huge, scarred, one-handed orc is the ship’s bosun, in charge of discipline. He carries a whip at all times, for both meting out punishments and to goad the crew in battle. Contrary to his appearance, he is a cunning tactician and a natural leader.

The Stormdaughter

Behind Aesha's violent and vengeful behavior lies a shame that consumes her. She hates the world for all that she has suffered and lost, and intends to inflict the same pain upon all who cross her path—particularly the elves who cast her out to begin with.

Much of the Stormdaughter's magical power comes from her study of the Brotherhood of the Yellow Sign. The more she works with the Unspeakable One's cultists, the closer she comes to truly worshiping that dread god. She comes to truly worshipping that dread god.

Chapter 7: Xian-Lei

In the Far East lies an empire long plagued by constant war between its own families, temples, and bureaucrats. One of the most powerful monasteries there was the Brotherhood of the Golden Dragon, or Jin-Lung, until its enemies united eight years ago to obliterate the order. However, a single monk, named Xian-Lei, miraculously survived certain death, and was washed downstream to the sea. Waking aboard a ship, he heard the officers arguing over whether to sell him as a slave or turn him in for a reward. Despite broken limbs, Xian-Lei slew all but one officer with his bare hands, and declared the ship his. The Hai-Lung now became the last Golden Dragon’s instrument of revenge upon the Imperial government who destroyed his order. The scope of Xian-Lei’s vendetta has since expanded to include merchants of his homeland, whose wealth supports the government.

One year ago, many families of the empire once again joined forces to take action against the Golden Dragon. A curse was laid on Xian-Lei and his ship so that whenever they approach the coastal waters of his homeland, the Hai-Lung’s crew becomes disoriented and lost. Xian-Lei continues to hunt in the waters near Freeport in order to acquire the means to have this curse broken, so that he can strike more directly at his enemies. Meanwhile, his frustration and rage continue to grow, making him even more unpredictable and violent than ever.

Xian-Lei

The last Jin-Lung is a slightly built man who refuses any title besides “Brother.” However, he burns with an unquenchable rage against those who slew his fellow monks, and this obsession rules his every action. He is ruthless and cruel, caring nothing for the innocent lives he takes while pursuing his revenge.

Jiantao

When Xian-Lei slew the previous captain and his officers and took command of the ship, he spared only Jiantao because he needed someone who knew the ship and her crew. The only time Jiantao is able to escape his shame is in battle, when taking others’ lives allows him to feel strong, brave, and whole. He is a brutally effective first mate, but the crew fear and despise him as a bully and a coward.

Drench (Ex) The elemental’s touch puts out torches, campfires, exposed lanterns, and other open, nonmagical flames of Large size or smaller. It can dispel magical fire it touches as dispel magic (CL 2nd).

Vortex (Su) When underwater, the elemental can transform itself into a whirlpool once every 10 minutes and remain in that form for 1 round. The vortex is 5 ft. wide at the base, up to 30 ft. at the top, and 10-20 ft. high.

Movement in vortex form never provokes attacks of opportunity. Another creature may be caught in the vortex if it touches or enters the vortex, or if the elemental moves into or through the creature’s space.

Tiny and smaller creatures take 1d4 damage when in contact with the vortex. A second save is required to avoid being caught and suspended within the vortex, automatically taking damage every round. Trapped creatures are allowed a Reflex save each round to escape. The save DC is Strength-based.

Those caught in the vortex can act normally, but take a -4 penalty to Dexterity and a -2 penalty to attack rolls, and spellcasting requires a Concentration check (DC 10 + spell level).

The elemental can eject any creatures whenever it wishes, depositing them wherever the vortex happens to be.

If the vortex’s base touches the bottom, it creates a swirling cloud of debris, centered on the elemental and with a diameter equal to half the vortex’s height. The cloud obscures all vision, including darkvision, beyond 5 ft.

Creatures 5 ft. away have concealment, while those further away have total concealment. Those caught in the cloud must make a Concentration check (DC 15 + spell level) to cast a spell.

Water Mastery (Ex) A water elemental gains a +1 bonus to attack and damage if both it and its opponent are touching water. If the opponent or elemental is touching the ground, the elemental takes a -4 penalty to attack and damage. (These modifiers are not included in the statistics block.)

CHAPTER 8: SCEVOLOA HEST

During the last years of the Golden Age of Piracy, the first mate of a pirate-hunting ship led a mutiny and turned corsair himself. So began the long and bloody career of Scevola Hest, who would become one of the most feared buccaneers ever to sail this world’s seas. One unlucky day a few years later, the Black Contessa took a ship with no treasure, only religious pilgrims. When the angry captain ordered the deaths of every man, woman, and child aboard, the congregation’s high priest told Hest that the gods would witness this deed and deny him the light of Heaven. The captain mocked his words, and continued plying the sea lanes until the pilgrims’ homeland sent an entire fleet to hunt down and sink the Contessa. They did, though at great cost.

However, this was not the final end of Scevola Hest. The Black Contessa appeared once again, a ghost ship crewed by the damned spirits of her crew, and all answering to its captain’s powerful will. Hest still preys on other ships, much as he did in life, but now that he and his crew are undead, these raids are motivated by sheer spite against the living rather than any desire for booty. Hest revels in the suffering of his victims, but he prefers to maximize the suffering he causes by choosing targets who will be missed: those with loved ones, or who hold key positions in temples or governments. Many of those so affected by his attacks, as well as fools hoping to make their own name by defeating the legendary captain, have attempted to rid the world of this abominable ship and crew. All have failed—and many have become trapped in the same curse, bound as unwilling minions of their intended quarry.

HESTIAN SPECTRE

A Hestian spectre appears much as it did in life, except that its entire form is tinged greenish-white and it appears to be either decomposing or skeletal, depending in the angle at which the light catches it.

The Hestian Spectre template below is based on the “Creating a Normal Spectre” sidebar to the Dread Spectre template in Green Ronin’s Advanced Bestiary. Traits have been added or modified to account for this crew’s ability to handle corporeal objects.

CREATING A HESTIAN SPECTRE

“Hestian Spectre” is an acquired template that can be added to any living, intelligent creature slain by a Hestian spectre and whose body was on board the Black Contessa when it vanished in daylight (referred to hereafter as the base creature).

A Hestian spectre uses all the base creature’s statistics and special abilities except as noted here.

Size and Type: The creature’s type changes to undead with the appropriate augmented subtype, plus the incorporeal subtype if the base creature did not already have it. Do not recalculate base attack bonuses, saves, or skill points.

Hit Dice: Increase all current and future Hit Dice to d12s.

Speed: A Hestian spectre loses all the base creature’s speeds and gains a flying speed equal to double the base creature’s highest speed, with perfect maneuverability.

Armor Class: The base creature’s armor, shield, and natural armor bonuses no longer apply, but the Hestian spectre gains a deflection bonus equal to its Charisma bonus or +1, whichever is higher. Hestian spectres can carry and use equipment (see Ghost Touch, below), but never wear armor unless it has the ghost touch enchantment.

Attack: The Hestian spectre retains all of the base creature’s natural attacks, and its weapon and armor proficiencies. However, all of its attacks (other than weapon attacks using Ghost Touch) become incorporeal touch attacks, retaining the same primary or secondary status they had for the base creature. The Hestian spectre gains a primary incorporeal touch attack if it has no other natural attacks.

A Hestian spectre uses either a weapon or its primary touch attack when making an attack action. Because an incorporeal creature has no Strength score, its Dexterity modifier rather than its Strength modifier applies to all its attack rolls.

Full Attack: During a full attack, an unarmed Hestian spectre uses all its incorporeal touch attacks. If it carries a weapon, it may make its full iterative attacks; if desired, it may also make a single offhand weapon attack or secondary incorporeal touch attack.

Damage: The Hestian spectre’s incorporeal touch attacks and Ghost Touch weapon attacks deal normal damage unmodified by Strength and energy drain (see Energy Drain, below). If the Hestian spectre gained an incorporeal touch attack from the application of this template, its damage is as given on the following table.

Special Attacks: The Hestian spectre retains all special attacks of the base creature and gains those described here.

Create Spawn (Su): Any creature slain by a Hestian spectre, and whose body is present aboard the Black Contessa when it vanishes in daylight, rises again as a Hestian spectre when the ship next reappears.

Energy Drain (Su): Any creature struck by a Hestian spectre’s incorporeal touch attack gains 2 negative levels. The Fortitude save to remove a negative level has a DC of 10 +1/2 Hestian spectre’s character level + Hestian spectre’s Cha modifier. For each such negative level bestowed the Hestian spectre gains 5 temporary hit points.

Ghost Touch (Su): A Hestian spectre is only as incorporeal as it wants to be. At will, it may carry and use equipment as if corporeal. If the Hestian spectre wishes, these items may become incorporeal while carried, but they become corporeal again if dropped or given away. A Hestian spectre uses its Charisma in place of Strength when making Strength checks or calculating carrying capacity.

Unnatural Aura (Su): Any creature of the animal type within 30 feet of a Hestian spectre automatically becomes panicked and remains so until the distance between it and the Hestian spectre is at least 30 feet.

Special Qualities: The Hestian spectre retains all special qualities of the base creature and gains those described here.

Denied the Light of Heaven (Su): The Black Contessa and all aboard her (as well as any Hestian spectres separated from the ship at the time) utterly cease to exist at the touch of sunlight. The ship and its crew reappear again at sundown, or when heavy storm clouds blot out the sun, though not always in the exact same location (at the GM’s discretion).

Turn Resistance (Ex): A Hestian spectre has turn resistance +2.

Abilities: Increase from the base creature as follows: Dex +6, Int +4, Wis +4, Cha +4. As an incorporeal creature, a Hestian spectre lacks a Strength score, and as an undead creature, it has no Constitution score.

Environment: Any aquatic (aboard the Black Contessa).

Organization: Crew (50–100).

Challenge Rating: Same as the base creature +3.

Treasure: Standard.

Alignment: Any evil (usually lawful evil).

Level Adjustment: Same as the base creature +7 (+8 or +9 if primarily a spellcaster).

Hestian Spectre Characters

A Hestian spectre favors whichever class the base creature does. Note that Hestian spectres are bound to Captain Hest and the Black Contessa, so are unsuitable as player characters unless future adventures focus on attempting to release the character from the ship and its curse.

Scevola Hest

Hest remains a skilled strategist who plans his attacks as if he and his crew were still vulnerable and as if seizing booty were their main goal. However, he is fully aware of the advantages of his incorporeal state, and uses them to frightening good advantage, especially in single combat.

The Captain’s Will (Su) Hest is lord and master of the Black Contessa, and all its crew are bound to him and his curse. As a standard action, he may wrack an undead crew member with excruciating pain (no save), imposing a -4 penalty to attack rolls, skill checks, and ability checks for as long as Hest maintains the effect. As a full round action, he may inflict pain on any number of crewmen within his sight. Finally, if a Hestian spectre truly angers the captain, Hest can disincorporate the offender. This is a standard action, and allows no save.

Energy Drain (Su) 2 negative levels; Fort DC 22 to remove.
D'Medicci is an effective second-in-command, but only as long as he speaks with borrowed authority. On his own, he is a tragically incompetent leader. He was content to bask in Hest's reflected glory while alive, but the crew's fear of him has been slowly eroding ever since the Black Contessa was cursed. Both shoddy and exceptional work draw the first mate's wrath; he fears being supplanted in the captain's favor.

Commodore Cosimo Ulisse

Ulisse commanded the fleet that finally sunk the Black Contessa. When the ghost ship returned, the Commodore gathered a new force, equipped with holy men and silver weapons, to attempt to destroy her again. He died in the attempt, as did all he led. Hest craved further revenge, so sent divers to recover Ulisse’s corpse and bring it aboard so that his archenemy would join the ranks of his crew the next night.

Ulisse is little more than a ghostly shell of his former self, and looks far more decomposed than the rest of the crew. The cruel irony of his fate has shattered his will; he now is little better than an automaton, following orders mindlessly with no initiative of his own.

Chapter 8: Scévola Hest

Sansaverio knew of Hest’s sedition, but failed to inform his captain before the mutiny occurred. Now he suffers eternal damnation along with the rest of Hest’s crew, and he is the only one aboard who believes he deserves it.
Cuomo Darr joined the navy only because it was a way to get paid for the one thing he did best: fighting. The transitions from military man to pirate and from living to undead hardly changed his behavior at all—Darr has always been a bloodthirsty thug, but now he’s a nearly invulnerable one.

Cuomo Darr

Cuomo Darr is a Male Hestian spectre warrior 2/corsair 2, LE Medium undead (augmented humanoid, incorporeal). His stats are as follows:

- Init: +5
- Senses: darkvision 60 ft.; Listen +2, Spot +3

Energy Drain (Su): 2 negative levels; Fort DC 15 to remove.
Appendix

This appendix is a compilation of all new skills, feats, and items introduced in the Buccaneers of Freeport 3rd Age Enhancement.

Skills

Language: Merfolk Code

The merfolk have adapted the original elven Naval Code to Aquan, but use a pattern of knocks on a hard surface rather than flashes of light for each letter. Sound travels well underwater, allowing the code to be used at distances of a few miles under ideal conditions.

Feats

Bear’s Paw

You are massively muscled for your size, with arms and hands strong enough to allow you to wield large weapons single-handed.

Prerequisites: Str 19, proficiency with any two-handed melee weapon, base attack bonus +6

Benefit: You may wield a two-handed melee weapon of your size as a one-handed weapon, but at a -2 penalty to attack rolls. You may not wield a double weapon or reach weapon with one hand.

Special: You do not add 1.5 x your Strength bonus to damage when wielding a two-handed weapon in one hand.

You may wield two two-handed weapons using the Two Weapon Fighting rules, but the penalties stack with the penalty to attacks for using this feat (for -8 and -12, or -6 each with the Two-Weapon Fighting feat).

Errata: Run ‘im Through

As written, the Run ‘im Through feat (see page 41 of the 3rd Age Freeport Companion) cannot be used with the rapier, which defeats the point of the feat. Its description should be corrected so that it can also be used with a rapier, spiked chain, or whip, just as the Weapon Finesse feat can.

Equipment

Axe-Hammer

This martial weapon is a handaxe backed by a light hammer. Proficiency with either weapon allows that side of the axe-hammer to be used without penalty. The wielder may only use one side at a time; it is not a double weapon.

Cost 12 gp
Damage (S) 1d4 (axe) or 1d3 (hammer)
Damage (M) 1d6 (axe) or 1d4 (hammer)
Critical x3 (axe) or x2 (hammer)
Range Increment —
Weight 4 lbs.
Type Slashing (axe) or Bludgeoning (hammer)

Magic Items

Rod of Firestarting

On command, this brass rod produces a gout of fire from one end. The flame resembles a torch, and will produce light and ignite flammable materials like one. The rod may also be wielded as a masterwork light mace, doing 1 point of fire damage in addition to normal damage while the flame is activated.

The rod cannot produce flame underwater, and is doused immediately if immersed.

Moderate evocation [fire]; CL 9th; Craft Rod, produce flame; Price 2,465 gp; Cost 1080 gp + masterwork light mace (305 gp) + 87 XP.

The Rapier of Regret

+1 rapier; AL CE; Int 10, Wis 17, Cha 17; Read all languages, read magic, speech (Common and 3 other languages), telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 15.

Lesser Powers: Deathwatch (continuous), detect magic at will; Item has 10 ranks in Intimidate (total modifier +13).

Greater Powers: Detect thoughts at will (continuous for the sword).

Personality: The Rapier of Regret is a subtle, devious, and thoroughly evil weapon that very rarely reveals its intelligence and powers openly. Instead, it uses the wielder’s own thoughts and memories to sap that creature’s cheer and purpose (represented by the negative level it inflicts on any user of different alignment). It does the same with foes the wielder fights, using detect thoughts, telepathy, and Intimidate to demoralize those it strikes by churning up whatever memory causes the foe the most guilt and regret.

In the hands of a chaotic evil creature, however, the Rapier reveals its true nature to its master and works as a full partner in spreading agony and despair.

Strong divination and necromancy [evil]; CL 15th; Craft Magic Arms and Armor; Price 32,620 gp.

Cloak of the Beast

This enchanted cloak consists of a complete wild animal pelt, with the head fastened to a light helm. To determine the animal used, roll 1d20: 1-5 = bear, 6-7 = bison, 8-12 = boar, 13-14 = lion, 15-16 = tiger, 17-20 = wolf.

The cloak of the beast provides the following benefits:

- +2 armor bonus to AC, with no armor check penalty.
- Endure elements, as the spell, but only protecting against cold temperatures.
- When worn by a character who can assume the matching animal’s form, or its dire version (whether through lycanthropy, wild shape or polymorph), the cloak merges with the animal form, without the wearer losing any of its benefits.

Moderate abjuration and transmutation; CL 6th; Craft Wondrous Item, endure elements, creator must have the appropriate alternate form or have the ability to use wild shape or polymorph; Price 8,000 gp; Weight 4 lbs.
Corset of Seduction

This fine boned corset accentuates a female wearer's natural endowments. It fills the vest/vestment body slot, and functions whether worn under or over regular clothing. While worn it gives the wearer a +5 bonus to Bluff skill checks against humanoids who find her race and gender attractive.

Faint enchantment; CL 3rd; Craft Wondrous Item, eagle’s splendor; Price 1,250 gp.

Gillslitter’s Toy

Gillslitter’s prosthetic arm is a construct that gives him several benefits. First, it gives him a +2 enhancement bonus to Dexterity. The Toy serves as a +1 Large heavy steel shield.

Whether attacking unarmed or with a weapon, the Toy is considered a reach weapon. Unarmed attacks use the Toy as a +1 Large spiked gauntlet. When holding a weapon, the Toy may act as a locked gauntlet, but removing or attaching a weapon only requires a standard action and does not provoke an attack of opportunity.

Moderate transmutation; CL 8th; Craft Construct, Craft Wondrous Item, cat’s grace; Price 9,500 gp; Weight 50 lbs.

Mirror of Lore

This ornate silver mirror is about the size of a dinner plate, and decorated with sapphires, making it quite valuable (5,000 gp) even without its enchantment.

AL NG; Int 16, Wis 16, Cha 10; Speech (Common and 3 other languages; reads all four), telepathy, 120 ft. darkvision and hearing; Ego score 10.

Lesser Powers: None.

Greater Powers: Legend lore 1/week (no casting time).

Personality: When someone looks into the Mirror of Lore, instead of seeing his own reflection he sees the visage of a deceased acquaintance, who speaks in the deceased’s voice. (If the character feels strong guilt over someone’s death, as Flynn does, he sees that person.) However, this is not the ghost of that person, but merely a guise that the spirit within the mirror adopts. When using its legend lore power, the mirror recites the results. At other times, its conversation tends to be rather vague, but it looks for clues in the user’s speech and reactions for how to impersonate the deceased more convincingly.

Strong divination; CL 11th; Craft Wondrous Item, legend lore; Price 14,400 gp; Cost 9,700 gp + 376 XP.

Prophylactic Amulet

The owner of this amulet cannot become pregnant (if female) or sire a child (if male) while wearing it. In addition, he or she receives a +4 bonus to saving throws to resist sexually transmitted diseases (but no other types of illness).

This amulet does not protect against supernatural diseases, nor does it prevent impregnation by any being with significant power over fertility or lust (nature gods, succubi, and the like).

Faint abjuration; CL 1st; Craft Wondrous Item, resistance, trained in Heal and Knowledge (nature); Price 500 gp.
